Over the past few years, the ETC Group has been piecing together the puzzle and uncovering in real time the current shifts in governance of global food systems. In their presentation, ETC Group will share the conclusions of their study “Hijacking food systems: technofix takeover at the FSS”, which highlights key aspects and players and frames what is a confusing and fast-moving situation into a simplified coherent and creative narrative. Civil society groups, social movements, and allies working on food justice need to fully understand the forces at play by investigating and interrogating the developments and dynamics in global food system governance so they can use the knowledge in their work with communities, especially in Southeast Asia.
