The Last Seed is a documentary feature film showing how the history and the future of African agriculture are threatened, with a focus on struggles over the control of seeds. African experts and small-scale food producers demonstrate how they save seeds from the destructive practices of corporations along with their efforts to transform our food systems. Farmers from Senegal, South Africa, and Tanzania talk about the sustainability and adaptability of their farming practices and share wisdom worth discovering.

THE FILM PREMIERE WILL BE FOLLOWED BY A DISCUSSION AND RECEPTION WITH THE FOLLOWING GUESTS:

- Daniela Trochowski, Executive Director of the Rosa-Luxemburg-Stiftung
- Cornelia Möhring, Member of the German Parliament, Die Linke, Spokesperson for Development Policy
- Dr. Angelika Hilbeck, ETH Zurich
- Refiloe Joala, Rosa-Luxemburg-Stiftung Southern Africa

MODERATION:

- Jan Urhahn, Rosa-Luxemburg-Stiftung

The documentary was produced by the Rosa-Luxemburg-Stiftung in cooperation with the Alliance for Food Sovereignty in Africa (AFSA), Biowatch South Africa and PELUM Tanzania. Written and directed by Andréa Gema, featuring interviews with Dr. Angelika Hilbeck of ETH Zurich, Mariam Mayet of the African Centre for Biodiversity (ACB), Dr. Mwatima Juma of Tanzania Organic Agriculture Movement (TOAM), and Prof. Mvuselelo Ngcoya, University of KwaZulu Natal, South Africa, and others.
